It was composed by a German composer, Christian Petzold (1677-1733). It is said to have been composed by Johann Sebastian Bach for a long time until 1970. However, we now know that the work was created by Petzold. Minuet in G Major is one of the works in the Notebook for Anna Magdalena Bach collection, which includes numerous works presented by various composers to J. S. Bach's second wife, Anna Magdalena. Only a few of Petzold's surviving works remain, and this work is one of his few. Minuet in G Major's melody has been used in pop music A Lover's Concerto, by the group The Toys, and many other media such as the film. By J. S. Bach on many levels. Now with the beginner version as well as the original music! Bach Minuet in G is a recognized work that children love to play. I have found that famous piano music is a real draw for even piano students who can only play Mary Had a Little Lamb! This is the only tune, setting an octave under the original, right in the Middle C region that many students are learning in their beginner method books! Please scroll down to the page to see the download link. Thumbs placed side by side in this arrangement, I have finger hints that allow the left finger to 4 F#, which occurs twice in the left hand. If the thumb in the middle of C - and your student fits the finger - then they will have to play that black key with a pinky finger, number 5! Always uncomfortable for beginners. The arrangement is similar, with the toy icons Please scroll down to the page to see the download links. Choy for a duet ... or student lead solo! Use this sheet if you want to imitate the original harmonies in this section for a small duet. Alternatively, you can bet that one of your students, already mastering the melody, will figure out how to play the ALL IN ONE HAND tune, and then start adding the same tone! This happens a lot to my students, and it's funny, because if I start them with all the tunes in one hand, they'll probably choose not to try this piece, and others. It's scary. But on their own, they will often start experimenting with the syming, and end up with a nice solo version. Elementary-level Music, Just a Little Simple Offer Your students pass the top stage one of this free classical piano music to begin with; first person here there is a left hand part much easier than the original. This is the first part of Minuet - there are actually two pages (see below). Note that the last phrase has a changed left hand, to make it easier for beginners to play. Please move down the page for download links. Page one of the original, no decorating Play octave stretches in the left hand greatly adds to the difficulty of putting this piece together! Please scroll down to the page to see the download link. The original full minuet I wrote down some popular decorations: Page Two! Please scroll down to the page to see the download link. This famous work is from the charming laptop for Anna Magdalena Bach. But it probably wasn't written by Johann Sebastian Bach at all! One Wikipedia entry says, Most of the items in the 1725 laptop were made by Anna Magdalena herself, with others written in the hands of Johann Sebastian, some by sons Johann Christian and Carl Philipp Emanuel, and a few by family friends such as Johann Gottfried Bernhard and Johann Gottfried Heinrich. Other composers contributed to the notebook Although the 1725 notebook contains works composed by Johann Sebastian Bach, it also includes works by many other composers. The author of several pieces is identified in the laptop itself, while others are founded by researchers. The composers of others still, including some of the famous songs of the time, are still unknown. Minuet in G major is a keyboard part included in the Notebook for Anna Magdalena Bach and is often attributed to Johann Sebastian Bach, but now it is often attributed to Christian Petzold. However, even today it is still quite unknown who wrote this work, in part because it was copied anonymously into the Handbook for Anna Magdalena Bach.
